KENTUCKY'S CROPS

United States Department of Agriculture

BUREAU OF CROP ESTIMATES

LOUISVILLE, KY.,
Aug. 10, 1918.

Kentucky's crop prospects at present may be summarized as being a wheat crop of approximately 12,129,000 bushels compared to 9,000,000 bushels last year; corn 16,774,000 bushels compared to 12,853,000 bushels in 1917; oats 8,029,000 bushels
last year; rye 449,000 bushels compared to 375,000 bushels compared to 375,000 last year; barley 138,000 bushels compared to 140, bushels last year; Irish potatoes 4,990,000 bushels compared to 6,720,000 bushels last year; and 351,171,000 pounds of tobacco compared to 425,600,000 pounds grown last year.

Corn has been badly damaged by the drought in some sections, but the late corn may be able very largely to overcome the damage if the rest of the season be favorable.

Although the potato crop is apparently seriously cut, in this state, by the drought, it should be remembered that tobacco can grow out wonderfully from drought damage in a very short time late in the season, and former reports of great drought damage to the tobacco crop have often proved deceptive because of quick growth late in the season. However, the crop in Kentucky has apparently been seriously damaged.

Late potatoes will probably yield better than the early crop.
The buckwheat crop, near Somerset, is reported in good condition, with the increased acreage.

HEALTH AND TYPHOID FEVER

At all times it is of much importance to observe sanitary rules, but this year it is more important than ever before to use preventative measures. The season for Typhoid Fever is now here. Those unfortunate enough to be sufferers from this disease will have less care; the families can not lose time to attend them without feeling the loss of time very keenly this winter. Typhoid can be prevented by cleaning up and keeping clean. All toilets should be cleaned and lime used freely; all hog pens kept clean; no cesspools allowed in back yards; screens patched no and flies kept out of kitchen and dining rooms.
Every home in which there is a case of fever should be kept scrupulously clean, and all inmates of the house should be vaccinated as early as the disease is diagnosed as typhoid.

HOW WAR MAKES YOU WANT A SOUND MIND AND BODY

How war, with its indeterminable emergencies, its unusual vicissitudes and its specialized minds in the most diverse directions, forces attention to innumerally problems that pertain to health, is set forth by a contributor to the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"The elimination of the ravage of disease among active troops has redounded to the credit of modern sanitation and prophylaxis," says this authority. "Military hygiene has set as its goal the attainment and conservation of health in the great body of fighting forces. There is much to be accomplished in the direction of eradicating unnecessary physical inferiority or deterioration associated with disease in all armies and navies.

"For some of the difficulties that present themselves an effective immediate solution is not in sight.
In other cases, notably such as are represented by the incidence of typhoid fever and other infections among the troops, the lessons of science are being applied with success. In any event, the world war has pointed to new defects which need remedies. It is a wholesome task to apply the contributions of the past when the opportunity arises.

"The conservation of health and the development of physical fitness are a soldier's first duty.
Marksmanship, military tactics, drill and co operation avail comparatively little when energy, strength and perfection of bodily training are neglected or lacking.
This has been demonstrated again and again among 'unseasoned troops'. Hence it is that so much attention is properly being concentrated on the establishment of health and vigor among groups of men in training everywhere.

"Athletic exercises compete with gun drills for recognition in the routine of a future soldier.
The unexpected adjunct to this is the widespread movement to apply the same principles of health conservation among those who cannot be expected to join the active fighting units. In many cities and towns the 'home-guards,' composed of men bey nd the usual military age, are already engaging in suitable physical exercise with the express purpose of rendering themselves more capable of the service which a sound body can best contribute.
If the maintenance of vigor is a desideratum among the middle-aged, sedentary type of our citizens at all times, it becomes a positive duty in a crisis in which the highest co operation of each individual is likely to be enlisted.

"Only a few months ago it might have been unusual to see any considerable number of business men of an age beyond 50 engaged actively in the pursuit of health as a patriotic duty. Today groups of such persons may be seen in more than one city cheerfully joining in a morning tramp to promote vigor, or responding to some special prescription of systematic exercise dictated by a medical examination under semi-official auspices.
Boy scouts and other young persons are similarly inspired. The war has brought an unprecedented desire on the part of many to attain a sound mind, in a sound body.

"The obedience to a patriotic impulse is almost certain to bring unexpected hygienic rewards and the enthusiasm for useful service of some sort, which has been awakened amongst all ages and classes of our population, and in all walks of life, is not to be without advantages in the domain of both personal and public hygiene."
